"Incarnate the Gospel"

urged Vinay Samuel, at a special meeting at NEAC on the role of Mission.

"We want you to share yourself. That has a tremendous impact on Non-Christians. We need people far more than money. We need people to come and live with us: to come in poverty, to demonstrate servanthood and partnership; not with technology 'to show us a better way'. It's not a question of your coming to train us: you haven't got anything to teach. Your western culture is task orientated; you want to achieve. We want you to share our lives. Even students coming for a short time bring hope and optimism to us. There is a basic pessimism in the Third World Church.

"Your (westerner) partnership should not undermine the Third World Church, but support it. Your message should include the demonstration of the gospel."

The hit and run of radio gossiping

"The people are fed up with Christian radio. It portrays a Christ manufactured elsewhere, and a non-carnate church. It brings no glory or people to Christ. It is hurling the message to them and telling them to make it real. It is hit and run, shooting from behind a screen.

"In many areas, including India, the church is seen as a western implant — a Church of England. It must develop its own identity as an Indian church."

What place has literature distribution?

"It is crucial — so long as it goes with people. We don't want tracts written by Americans who've never left Chicago.

What about reaching others in Australia?

"There are host family systems for migrants, there are overseas students who've never seen inside an Australian home."

What of the problems of cross cultural evangelism?

Christ could cross from the Trinitarian culture of God, to become a Two. But no-one is saying that it's not hard."

Is Biology Destiny?

7. Is 'cure of souls' an exercise of such authority? Yes, as normally understood.

8. Does ordination as deacon necessarily confer such authority? No.

9. Does ordination as priest necessarily confer such authority? No. (arguable).

"The ordination of women is just the tip of the iceberg when concerned with the whole issue of ministry of both male and female, ordained and lay people. We should place all our deliberations within the framework of the question: 'What will further the Gospel?'"

Some reasons against

1. Various Pauline passages rule against the leadership of women, and the equal status of women with men in marriage and public life. They include admonitions to women to be silent and not to teach. The main passages are:

1 Corinthians 14:33-35
1 Timothy 2:11-15
1 Corinthians 11:8-9
Ephesians 5:22-24

Yet these passages need to be seen in context, and within Paul's general acceptance of women in ministry. Women in families are to be submissive to husbands.

2. These passages emphasise the authority of the man over the woman (or is it husband over wife?) and the need for the subordination of the woman (as Christ is subordinate to the Father).

Some reasons for

1. The passages quoted from Corinthians, Timothy and Ephesians when seen in context are seen as being in a cultural context. The main Biblical principle upon which the ministry and ordination of women should be based is the idea of reconciliation of male and female in Christ. Galatians 3:28 is the embodiment of this idea.

2. A husband is seen as having authority over his wife (not necessarily male over female) but within a loving and caring relationship. Women are not subordinate to men per se in the same way that Christ is not subordinate to the Father. (ref. John 10:30 and John 14:9-10).

3. It appears from the New Testament that there were women deacons such as Phoebe, perhaps a woman apostle, Junia (Romans 16:7) women prophets and teachers and various other women with gifts of ministry.

5. Each person has special gifts, whether male or female; one in counselling, another in teaching, another in youthwork; some may relate better to men, some to women; women ministers should be able to work together with men in a team ministry so no one person is expected to be able to do everything.

6. Ministry should not just be a position of authority but a serving role and a teaching role based on the model of Christ. Women as well as men can identify with Christ's "feminine" qualities of service, humility and love."

— BARBARA DARLING

"Ministry is to be a keynote of Christians as they show loving care for one another and for the world. At the same time the pattern emerges in the Bible of individuals being raised up by God to facilitate this ministry, of God and his people.

The same type of pattern emerges in the New Testament Church. There are evangelists, distributors of food, prophets and deacons, deaconesses, people doing miracles of healing. There is no clear pattern which emerges anywhere as to how the ministry was arranged.

It is against this background of God's movement toward people, and of ministry exercised through His people, that there appear the somewhat unexpected calls to "women" to be silent in the church — 1 Corinthians 14:34 — "Let the 'wives' keep silent in the churches", and 1 Timothy 2:12 — "I do not permit a 'wife' to teach nor exercise authority over a 'husband' but to be in silence.

It is difficult to dismiss them as being linked with the culture of Paul's day and so irrelevant to the present day. In the Corinthians passage the immediate following words are "but to remain in subjection even as the law says". Then in the 1 Timothy quotation Paul goes on with the words "For Adam was moulded first and then Eve". There is something inherent in the creation which gives rise to this injunction. In neither case is it culture, it is God's creative action and God's law.

I have translated the Greek words as 'husband' and 'wife' rather than 'man' and 'woman'.

The scripture does teach an order within marriage. It is paralleled by Christ's relationship with the church and so is appropriate to every age.

(a) husbands have a leadership role in marriage which is expressed in loving service.

(b) wives have a following role in marriage which fits in with the husband.

With respect to God each is an individual relating to God through Christ in the same way; with respect to society they form a unit; and with respect to each other, there is order so that a smooth working relationship will continue until death breaks the marriage.

I suggest the Biblical injunctions to wives not to teach or exercise authority in the church are aimed at avoiding the inevitable tensions that would arise if a husband and wife followed one leadership pattern in the human family and another in the Christian family.

It should be noted that this conclusion makes no statement on the exercise of teaching, or other forms of leadership by unmarried women. As far as I can see scripture places no limitations on such.

No limitation is placed on a married woman exercising leadership in the congregation of which her husband is not a part.

I do not think a wife whose husband is in the congregation need be prevented from ever speaking or making a contribution to the fellowship. Leadership is not established by one sermon and it is leadership that is the real issue.

There is a need to widely encourage people to minister for the edification and building up of God's people. We have a tendency, like the Corinthians, to overstress the seemingly spectacular gifts like preaching and forget that the person sweeping the leaves to the glory of God and the good of the congregation is as much as validly a minister as the preacher. I suspect we need to think more about the building up and well being of God's people and less about ourselves and what gift we think God has given us and whether others are going to let us exercise it. If we are concerned about building up the church God will show us what needs doing and what we can do; our gift!"

— BISHOP PETER CHISWELL

"The only thing women can't do in the church is administer communion. I can't see why they can't. You can teach a monkey to act, but you can't teach him to preach.

"It is impossible to find any doctrine of ordination in the scriptures. Ministry in the scriptures is functional," said members of one workshop on this issue.

The most moving experience in an outback tour of Central Australia by the African evangelist, the Reverend Matt Nyagwaswa, in mid-May, was to preach at the funeral of an Aboriginal boy who had died just before the evangelist had flown into Ernabella.

Mr Nyagwaswa, who is from Tanzania, was in the education service for 27 years before being ordained about a year ago. He came to Australia, as one of the three team leaders from African Enterprise, who have been conducting missions in Australia.

His programme included a week's preaching tour of the Piltjintjartjara area.

The boy who had died of leukaemia was the son of Raymond Tjilya, an elder in the Ernabella Piltjintjartjara church. Mr Nyagwaswa found that the Aboriginal community he had expected to meet at Ernabella had left the station and gone to an encampment some distance away as is their mourning custom.

Mr Nyagwaswa was invited by the grieving parents to attend the mourning camp, where he went accompanied by the white community who were to have attended an evening meeting in Ernabella. In his message round the campfires that evening the evangelist said he had expected to be welcomed in the Ernabella church, but God had provided "a more wonderful place for him to share Jesus and the joy of heaven".

Mr Nyagwaswa went back to the camp the next morning and gave another talk and made a third visit for the funeral later in the day. With the help of Piltjintjartjara interpreters, Paul Eckert and Peter Nyangu, Mr Nyagwaswa spoke of the hope that Christianity brings that death could not destroy.

The father of the dead boy testified of his own faith in God, and said that at his wish the boy would be buried near the church, a major break with the spirit-world tradition of the Aborigines.

Another man, who had been a witch doctor, renounced all contact with evil spirits, and a woman from Amata proclaimed her wish to follow Jesus. Other women asked for prayers for deliverance from evil spirits.

"Sail of the Century"

"Sail along with Jesus on Sail of the Century", sang the children at their Holiday Bible Club directed by Scripture Union Children's Missioner, Owen Shelley, during the first week of school holidays at St. Andrew's, Summer Hill. 56 children from infants through to high school age were involved.

First impressions on entering the 'Sail of the Century' were, of a sailing ship — everything from skull and cross bones to fish nets, a helm and life-jackets. The craft work included treasure maps and chests, paddle-pop rafts and boats, and pirate's hats.

Following the themes 'launched', 'wrecked', 'salvaged', 'restored', and 'commissioned', life as a Christian was discussed and illustrated in class sessions each morning. This was followed by outdoor games, craft work and a puppet show of C. S. Lewis' "The Lion, the Witch and the Wardrobe".

"The aim is to share God's Word with the children so they can come to know Him and be built in Him," said Mr. Shelley. "Children are wax to receive and granite to retain. I am now meeting people who became Christians when they were children in one of my Holiday Bible Clubs."

Witchcraft in common

The evangelist was touched to find the ease with which he could identify with Aboriginal people with whom he was meeting as a race for the first time. He found that things Africans and Australian Aborigines had held in common were witchcraft and superstition, but his message to them asserted that faith in Christ was much stronger.

"This visit to Central Australia and the Aborigines has been my most exciting experience in Australia so far," he said. "It has also given me a deeper insight into an understanding of the Aboriginal people."

Betrayed by Christian Zionists

The acting mayor of Ramalla on the West Bank, Anglican priests Audeh Rantisi, feels most betrayed by the Christian Zionists; Christians who believe that the Kingdom of God will not come until the Jews return to Jerusalem. "This view," the Rev. Audeh Rantisi says, "is heretical." "Christ fulfilled the Old Testament, and Jerusalem is spoken of as a spiritual, not a geographical place in the New Testament. Such a belief, encouraged by Israel, makes Christianity a Jewish sect, rather than regarding Christ as the Fulfiller of the old promises."

He reflects Palestinian anger over the Camp David agreement: "How can a people have autonomy when their land is taken away? Israelis do not want to resolve the situation but to drive people out. Camp David was the funeral parlour in which the directors decided how they would bury us."

It is not generally realised that the majority of Christians in the Middle East are Arabs, nor how much the creation of Israel in 1948 affects the life of the Church in Israel, Syria, Palestine, Jordan and Lebanon. The media keeps before us the Jewish struggle to keep their land, and the killing of innocent people in raids and bombing by the P.L.O. Less is said, however, of the Palestinians suffering inflicted by the Israelis and others, and the fact that if peace is to come to the Middle East the Palestinians too, need a permanent home.

UNRWA (United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East) estimates there are about 4 million Palestinians of whom 1,757,269 are registered as refugees. Of these, about 35% live in refugee camps, the majority since 1948. They are tolerated, but not welcomed by their hosts. Their role in the civil war in Lebanon has led to social discrimination against them, and in Jordan the army has been used to control them. In Lebanon there are constant attacks by the Israelis.

Perhaps in Jerusalem, Israel's policy is most clearly seen. In 1948 there were over 30,000 Christians, now there are under 8,000. As one Anglican priest commented, 'Israel's claim to give "freedom of access" to the sacred shrines means only allowing foreigners to visit. It is not a matter of access, but the rights of the Christian, Muslim and the Jewish community which are essential. 10-15% of Palestinians are Christian. The witness is the living community, rather than the holy places.'

Membership of the P.L.O. is outlawed in Palestine, yet it is accepted as being the voice of the Palestinians by 90% of the Palestinians. Any just solution for the Palestinians, then, must be found in consultation with the P.L.O. Bishop Eliya Khoury was a member of the Executive Committee, reflecting the very significant number of Christians actively committed to its work. He was arrested, accused of smuggling explosives, and imprisoned. He is banned from Jerusalem, his

If you can't go . . . send your Bible

The WORLD HOME BIBLE LEAGUE has commenced a project in which "good used Bibles" are to be sent to Third World countries for use by missionaries. They will be given free of any charge to nationals who may be studying English, or know something of the language.

The aim is to send over one million copies. Already over 350,000 have been sent to India, Africa and the Philippines.

Booklets, Bibles, Gospel portions, literature for the sick, as well as for those going through bereavement, was on display at a recent meeting to explain the project. The whole aim is to equip local churches and to encourage their members in visitation and evangelism.

"Here are the tools," said Mr. Emery. "Now you can do the job."

Canon Law Commission's Report

The Canon Law Commission of the Church of England in Australia (Anglican Church of Australia) has produced for the coming General Synod a remarkable and valuable document surveying and summarising some important areas of church law in Australia.

The subject is a difficult one because the roots of that law go back over 2,000 years and it is difficult to discern what parts, if any, of the earlier law are still operative, while the migration of members of the Church from England to Australia during the last two centuries has radically altered some of the laws by which church life was regulated in England.

Finally the creation of autonomous diocesan synods has further modified that law as well as creating a great number of new laws suited for the way of life of our Australian church.

The Canon Law Commission report is an important though still preliminary contribution to understanding the rules that regulate the Anglican ecclesiastical scene in Australia.

The Christian church is essentially a fellowship. The local congregations, which are the expression of the church, are essentially fellowships consisting of men, women and children who have responded to the gospel of God by faith in Jesus Christ, have been adopted as sons and daughters of God and have received his Spirit's presence in their lives.

This common relationship to God creates a common relationship with each other through the Spirit's presence, a relationship of friendship and of mutual love, care and concern as they meet with each other for fellowship in the things of God.

The report shows the different ways by which the local churches are governed; some ways are better than others. In shaping the forms of government of the local congregation the important thing is to preserve the reality of the fellowship and this means preserving responsibility of the fellowship for its own spiritual life.

If a congregation is to be a true spiritual fellowship it must be responsible for its own ministry, having a significant voice in the choice of its minister and also in suggesting that he should cease his ministry if it no longer appears to be one God is giving.

Of course no congregation should act independently of other congregations for interdependency is not in keeping with Christian character. However, this does not mean it should be under the domination of someone outside its own fellowship. The report shows that various dioceses meet this principle of responsibility in various ways, some better than others, but none have an effective method by which the congregation can escape from a ministry which does not commend itself as a ministry of God.

A word of warning

There is one tendency in the report which calls for a word of warning and that is the suggestion that the General Synod should be given more authority over the dioceses on the grounds that this will make for greater efficiency.

This is a tendency which must be resisted as it threatens fellowship. Fellowship is by consensus but if there is an authority effectively outside the fellowship, who has power to impose decisions on the fellowship, without the fellowship having an opportunity of arriving at a common mind on the matter, this contradicts responsibility and negates fellowship and dissipates it. Efficiency and fellowship have little relationship.

The Christian church is a fellowship and it was in order to preserve fellowship that in 1872 and again in 1961 when the two constitutions for the Church of England in Australia were established, the Australian dioceses resisted the pressure of giving the General Synod power to legislate for the diocese without the full consent of the diocese concerned.

The Commission's report while acknowledging this, argues for centralising more power in the General Synod on the grounds that this will be more efficient. However this is a suggestion that ought not to be accepted. We should strive for greater consensus but in the absence of a consensus decisions must rest with the diocese which is sufficiently compact in area for people to know one another and to have an ongoing fellowship out of which decisions for the well being of the churches can arise by consensus and not by decisions imposed from outside.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Dear Sir,

I do not wish to attack P. G. Smith (Letters, 18th May) — merely the misleading statements which are included in his letter and are believed by quite a few people.

From "Through the Looking Glass" we have the memorable quotation, "When I use a word, Humpty Dumpty said in a rather scornful tone, 'it means just what I choose it to mean'". Words are not a useful means of communication unless they are used with some consistency of meaning. The variability of the way we use words allows authors to pen artistic words, comedians to amuse us, and con-men to deceive us. What is the meaning of the word "religion"? One of the meanings found in the Concise Oxford Dictionary is as follows: "Human recognition of superhuman controlling power and especially of a personal God entitled to obedience, effect of such recognition on conduct and mental attitude".

Does this recognised meaning of the word "religion" correspond with the nature of Freemasonry? The answer can be found in Freemasonry's ritual book at the beginning of the First Sectional Lecture (amongst other places), where we read "The nature, character, the attributes and perfections of the Deity are faithfully portrayed, and are well calculated to influence our conduct towards Him, as our Father, Benefactor, and Moral Governor, as also in the proper discharge of the duties of social life." A very good fit! Does Masonry have a Catechism? The very next sentence in the ritual is "The mode of Masonic instruction is catechetical, or in more familiar terms, by question and answer". In fact, the Blue Lodge has two short catechisms (called "Preliminary Examinations") and three long ones (called "Sectional Lectures" which occupy 120 pages of the ritual book).

Does Freemasonry have dogmas? Again from the O.E.D. a dogma is a "principle, tenet, doctrinal system, esp. as laid down by authority of Church". The Churches and Freemasonry are not alone in having principles and doctrinal systems which a person must agree with in order to be considered a "true blue member". Does Freemasonry have a creed? Again from the O.E.D. one of the meanings of the word "creed" is "system of religious belief". You won't find Freemasonry's creed presented in the ritual to conveniently short summary form, but it is sprinkled throughout the ritual.

But the ritual also contains an exhortation to all new Masons to abstain "from discussion upon any religious or political topic" while in the Lodge Room. Could P.G. Smith please explain to us what meaning is meant by the word "religious" in this exhortation?

I am not accusing Masons of being con-men when they say that Masonry is compatible with Christianity, just that they don't understand what they are saying. The Mason's hope is that "by square conduct, level steps, and upright intentions we hope to ascend to those immortal mansions whence all goodness emanates". However, one of the first steps in becoming a Christian is to recognise that "all have sinned and come short of the glory of God" (Romans 3:23).

My wish is that more people, including Masons, will find forgiveness and new life in Christ, who is the only way to God.

Yours faithfully,
(G. D. L. Costin)

Dear Sir,

It was heartening to read your editorial regarding homosexuality on 4/5/81 (p.2).

However, we need also as Christians, fight with all our might against the whole concept of 'anti-sexism' and the myth of the gender free society. Homosexuals believe that if you can educate society to become 'unisex' then homosexuality will be accepted. This is satanic; we are not just 'persons', we are either a male person or a female person. Individuals cannot live apart from their sexuality. Being male/female effects everything I am and will be. God has clearly ordained sex roles and our children must be kept from the pernicious ideology (Humanist-Marxist) that seeks to turn us all into hermaphrodites.

Psychoanalyst Harold M. Voth states, "Human beings are not biologically bisexual... the human spirit is greatly impaired when childhood development does not lead to fully developed masculinity or femininity". Mature masculine men and feminine women, as the term implies can live their abilities and potential to the full. These include the living in harmony with a member of the opposite sex, marriage, procreation, responsible parenthood and if one is single, the ability to devote oneself to one's chosen career.

It's time we Christians realised the dangers of "anti-sexism" and took some immediate action to have it removed from our schools.

Yours sincerely,

Alan Barron

Dear Sir,

It is not for me to defend the programme committee responsible for N.E.A.C. However, it does seem a little ungenerous to attack it for not having given greater place to the challenge of world mission. I wrote this after reflection, because I did, in the heat of the moment, sign a petition which was circulating at the showing of the film on Islam towards the end of the conference.

Surely, no one can accuse Anglican evangelicals of neglecting the foreign missionary cause. The numerous displays in the foyer of the Blackwood Hall testified to the interest in such matters. What has not always been so obvious has been a concern for people in the next suburb or on the wrong side of the railway tracks; and the emphasis at N.E.A.C. was precisely on some of the areas which have lacked attention. This was a wholly desirable development.

Further, in Vinay Samuel's passionate address at the conclusion of the film, he sounded what seemed to me an urgent note of warning about our manner of involvement in world mission — that it should be person-centred, not project-centred. It is to the great credit of the Australian C.M.S. that it insists on this very point in allocating its priorities, and indeed, it has been criticized for doing so.

I thank God for the stimulation and challenge which N.E.A.C. provided. It was not just another convention.

Yours faithfully,

Alan Friend,
Kensington

DR PETER TOON ON CHRISTIAN LIFESTYLE

"I feel we need to convey the impression that life-style is really about being Christians today — not a gimmick or latest fad."

Peter Toon is a lecturer at Oak Hill Theological College, London.

What is the fundamental question?

What it is not:

1. How should we dress and eat?
2. Where should we live?
3. Where is the blueprint or perfect model and how is it to be implemented?
4. What luxuries should we give up?
5. Should we reduce our expenses and consumption in order to be able to give more to the needy?
6. How can we best use our time, abilities and resources?
7. How should we relate to the affluent, consumer, technological society? (Yet these are, in and of themselves, important questions)

What it is:

1. How is the kingdom of God to be seen, realised, experienced and exhibited in the church today?
or
2. What does it mean in down-to-earth practical terms for the local church to be truly and effectively God's people in God's world today — in terms of its corporate life, worship, fellowship, mission and service?

The basic question for Christian families and individuals cannot be stated in isolation from the fundamental question for the church.

CHRISTIAN LIFE STYLE: What is needed to be able to think and act seriously about it?

1. A right understanding of the question.
2. A right theology. This could arise from the images of the church (light, salt, people of God, temple of Spirit, etc.) — or from the work of the Spirit who is creating a holy people in the world for God's glory — or from a study of the teaching of Jesus.
3. Finding suitable introductory models for the local church, nuclear family and individual.
4. An awareness of dangers and problems — e.g. taking on too much at the beginning; isolationism and idiosyncrasy; legalistic interpretation of model; judging others; giving up too quickly . . . etc.

1. Fellowship is sharing and ministering at a deep human level in the local church.

Apart from the standard types of church fellowship — in Eucharist, bible study, etc. there are such possibilities as:

- (a) Extended families — nuclear families with one or two people, living with them for long or short periods.
- (b) Neighbourhood worship clusters — 2 or 3 family units in one street or block of flats worshipping together midweek.
- (c) Regions of care. Dividing the parish formally or informally into areas of care, led with people with appropriate pastoral gifts.
- (d) Intentional communities. Some members of the church deliberately moving to live in adjoining houses or apartments so as to develop a community within the church community.

2. Fellowship is also sharing within the worldwide Church to which the local church belongs.

Sharing personnel, resources and faith with other Christians; using only what we truly need so that what is surplus may meet the need of others.

Apart from standard forms of giving — there are such possibilities as:

- (a) Supporting one or two members who for a limited period work in and with a church which has been adopted.
- (b) Making a cooperative effort as a church to live simply so that what is saved may be given wisely to the relief of poverty.
- (c) Sharing expensive items like cars, lawnmowers and little used electrical gadgets and developing the ancient art of walking and the recent art of cycling.

3. Fellowship leads to a sharing in the mission of God to the world.

It is reflecting the grace of God, not only by what we say and do but by what we are and how we relate to one another.

Apart from standard forms of evangelism and social concern there are such possibilities as:

Cathedral. He believes a solution can be found if outsiders stop interfering. The USA and Europe are supporting Israel with arms and funds, but are becoming frightened that their oil might be cut off.

What is the aim of the P.L.O.? Major Azzaneh Abu Abed, commander of the P.L.O. in South Lebanon, said, "Our aim is to establish a secular government in Jerusalem in which Muslim, Christian and Jew will share, with everybody's rights respected." To which a soldier added, "Then we will throw our arms in the sea." Israel, however seems determined to continue without sharing. One recent newspaper advertisement for support of the students of the Yeshivot Leader says they 'yearn for Tora learning and also seek to fulfil their Zionist duties.'

Yet the solution for the West Bank may come from an unexpected direction, according to a book, "The Population of Israel"; by 2010 the Arab population of the West Bank could be 10 million while the Jewish population only 45% of that. Should Israel annex the West Bank and have a democratic government, Jews could be out-voted. Thus the P.L.O. could achieve its goal through love, rather than war.

This is the situation in which the Anglican Church struggles to bear witness. Peace seems far away. Violence is used by both Palestinian and Israeli, moderates or those prepared to work towards a compromise are often attacked by their own extremists.

Political barriers prevent it meeting as a Church, even its theological students if they hold Israeli passports cannot be trained in Beirut, its nearest theological seminary. How then does it keep a sense of unity? As Bishop Khoury, Anglican bishop in Amman said, "by prayer".

Rev. Martin Chittleborough (ACC)

- (a) mission groups to local people.
- (b) active involvement in local politics as definite ministry — e.g. on school boards.

BASIC TASK: How can we as members of local churches bring our congregations to:

- (1) an awareness of
- (2) a desire to discuss, and
- (3) the beginnings of practical implementation of being God's church

One real aspect of the general task is to replace PRIVACY with COMMUNITY.

"Conformity to privacy is as much a curse as conformity to affluence. The two stand hand in hand. Privacy is the concentration upon self and upon those who belong to me intimately. Christians as much as other people in the community want private gardens, individual houses or apartments, their own cars, a bedroom each, portable TV sets . . . and many other similar things. The more affluent the person, the more private the lifestyle." McInnes, p. 74.

How does 'privacy' invade the mentality and practice of local churches?

GUIDELINES FOR AUSTRALIAN CHRISTIANS

Dr Toon's paper on lifestyle was discussed at NEAC workshops. Set out below are some of the points there raised.

General Points

1. In approach to 'life-style' examine motives, avoid gimmicks.
2. Be careful of uncritically following models from elsewhere: let Christ interact with your situation and become Lord of it.
3. Be patient: have a vision but implement it little by little, taking all along.
4. Place of Sunday is critical: the nature of worship/fellowship/teaching etc. in liturgical context needs careful study, especially in the light of the development of Australian society in recent times.

A vision for wholeness of the church

1. Difficulties to be overcome include:
 - (a) seeing each other very briefly only on Sunday
 - (b) isolationism of nuclear families and singles
 - (c) tendency to be self-sufficient
 - (c) the hiding of emotions and problems
 - (e) the formalism and clergy domination of Anglicanism
2. Towards a solution may include one or more of these:
 - * meeting in small caring groups
 - * study groups
 - * sharing of pastoral oversight by priest with mature adults/couples
 - * short discussion after appropriate sermons
 - * prayer partnerships across the congregation
3. Role of clergy needs careful examination.
4. The idea of time needs to be looked at . . . too many of us are too much in a rush that we have no time for people even on Sundays
5. The ministry to the sick and shut-ins needs to be maintained by a regular group.

A vision of wholeness for the nuclear family

- * Role of male/female: need to work at what Mrs. Cohen encouraged. Don't let popular, fundamentalistic USA books set the agenda here.
- * Encourage family to make decisions together/
- * Only enter into community living with other families after taking careful advice.
- * As a family adopt one or two shut-ins — love, visit, pray help him/her on a regular basis.
- * Make contacts with other families engaged in your task and compare notes from time to time.
- * Make contacts with other families engaged in your task and compare notes from time to time.
- * Concerning hospitality, do a little well, build up slowly.
- * Make family prayers interesting, relevant, outward-looking.
- * Develop contacts with older people in church who can be as grandparents or older aunts or uncles.
- * Pray to, and work to, achieve a balance of both meeting internal family needs and the needs of others.
- * Seek to get the whole church to take not only marriage preparation but marriage counselling and care of families seriously as real ministry.

Holiness for the single person

What are we doing to use their Christian experience for the good of all and what are we doing to help those who feel lonely, threatened, etc.

Prevention rather than cure

NEAC workshop concludes on the Christian responsibilities in Family Law.

John Wade presented four papers at this workshop. One set out the background to The Family Law Act. The others were entitled "The Functions of the Law", "The Functions of Marriage and the Family" and "Reasons for Marriage Breakdown".

The latter looked at some reasons under four heads:

- 1) High marriage rate
- 2) Poor choice: mobility, loneliness. "Falling in Love": Modern man finds marital choice a hazardous undertaking and he therefore falls back on a magical formula for reassurance. Now, while this formula may allay anxieties, it remains a magical one. Its chief danger lies in the fact that, instead of causing a person to exercise special care it causes him to throw caution to the winds on the slight, and at all times intangible pretext that it is a case of being in love. Pregnancy. Young marriage. Easily obtainable divorce (though this argument rests on the basis that the legal system educates).
- 3) Unrealistic expectations: of romance, individual fulfilment, of career and parenthood.

4) Role confusion and inability to adapt to change: changing roles: "Our initial perception of our marital role may change with the passage of time. When you marry you don't become linked to a single woman or a single man; you become bound to all the women or all the men she or he will become."

Changing places. The isolated nuclear family. The inability to communicate. The snowball effect of marriage breakdown.

DISCUSSION SUMMARY

The Family Law Act

The group discussed and distinguished what the law is and what the law ought to be in relation to families in the (i) General community, (ii) Christian community.

The complex causes and symptoms of family breakdown were discussed. Christians can contribute to (i) prevention and (ii) cure of marriage breakdown by inter alia within the Christian community:—

- (1) promoting dating and marriage between Christians (including pooling Christian young people — eg C.S.S.M.)

Can you take yourself to see it?

POPEYE

Undoubtedly yes — and the kids.

It is a faithful reproduction of the cartoon character and the make-up, costume and set designs are little short of extraordinary.

All good clean family fun, done tastefully and with great humour. A little slow in spots but the kids seem to enjoy it a great deal.

Thoroughly recommended. (Nice to be able to say 'Yes' to one occasionally!)

22 Feet of greetings

7 Siberian Christians trapped for 3 years in the American Embassy in Moscow received a 22-foot long banner containing Easter Greetings and personal messages from approximately 5,000 British Christians.

The group (5 Vashchenkos and 2 Chmykhalovs), known as "The Siberian Seven", have been described as "hostages of conscience". They belong to the Pentecostal Church, thought to be the largest group of religious dissidents in the USSR. Only 3 of the 13 Vashchenko children are with the parents in the Embassy. Mrs. Chmykhalov and her son are separated from Mr. Chmykhalov and 4 other children.

The Easter Greeting is the first stage of a National campaign led by "Buzz Magazine" in England to break the deadlock over the group's predicament. Following years of harassment, including Mr. Vashchenko's imprisonment in labour camps and psychiatric hospitals and a camp sentence for the oldest son, the seven were stranded in the Embassy in 1978 after they went there to discuss their case for emigration. That turned into a desperate plea for refuge after the Vashchenko's 17-year-old son was beaten up in front of their eyes outside the Embassy. Despite assurances of resettlement in the USA, their requests for emigration have been refused. In a Catch 22 situation, the Soviet authorities deny having received their appeal to leave the USSR.

Mr. Peter Meadows, of Buzz, said: "We believe that the Soviet Union may release these families to Britain or Canada rather than America. But after 3 years of confinement they risk being forgotten. We can't let that happen."

A letter writing campaign is already underway and a day of demonstration is being planned for Saturday June 27, the third anniversary of the internment in the Embassy.

A coconut theology? A kava theology?

Delegates to the fourth Pacific Conference of Churches Assembly discussed the issue of Pacific Theology. What is Pacific theology? Is there such a thing?

Dr. Salesi Hava of the Pacific Theological College presented a paper.

What symbols and metaphors taken from the daily life and culture of the Pacific people may be used as theologians to help people to understand more clearly the meaning of the Gospel? As Jesus took symbols from the life and spoke in parables to the people of his time, or Kosuke Koyama takes symbols from the life of people to explicate the Christian revelation, so we in the Pacific must learn to take the experience of the life of Pacific people to assist them in understanding the faith.

The second question was "What aspects of Christian revelation speak particularly to various Pacific issues and

Renewal at Elcho Island

The Bible Society in Australia will publish the Gospel of John as the first complete book of the Bible in Djambarrupyu later this year.

Djambarrupyu is spoken by six hundred Aboriginal people on Elcho Island, off the coast of Arnhem Land in the Northern Territory. The translation work in this language is being co-ordinated by Miss Dianne Buchanan of the Uniting Church Missions Department, with the assistance of an Aboriginal woman called Wanyumli.

The main stories about creation and the life of Abraham have already been translated into Djambarrupyu. Miss Buchanan said a spiritual renewal among the people at Elcho Island in 1979 has brought about a growing hunger for the Bible in their own language.

There is a conscious thinking among the people at Elcho Island to promote a Christian lifestyle. The local Aboriginal Council often takes issues to prayer before making decisions.

According to Miss Buchanan, there is an ongoing need for translation work on Elcho Island. More sections from the Old Testament will be required to provide an adequate understanding to the New Testament books. "We must be available to meet the needs of the Church as they surface," she said.

Record college enrolment for Baptists

This year's enrolment of 130 students for courses at the Baptist Theological College of Queensland constitutes a record.

Of these, 112 are full course students, and over 30 are students who have enrolled at the college for the first time.

College enrolments have grown rapidly in recent years. There were over 80 students in 1979 and just over 100 last year.

The College Registrar, Mr. Doug. Peterson, said the growth had caused his task to become hectic, but exciting.

"I believe the Lord has laid his hand on our College," he said.

The College's Department of Leadership Studies has also set a record this year with more than 200 people enrolled.

The Department provides part time courses for lay people with lectures at the College and various other locations. The courses are also available externally.

Mobile bookshop begins tour

A ten foot tandem wheel trailer packed with over $3000 worth of Christian books, and hitched to a Falcon station wagon, left Brisbane on April 10 for a four month tour of country Queensland.

The 'Country Christian Bookshop' spent Easter at Harvey Bay, then began a tour through the Burnett area to Emerald, Longreach, Winton, Charleville, Miles and Taroom.

Mr. Floyd plans to stay three or four days in the centres he visits, setting up his mobile store where possible in church yards or on private property. In some areas he opens for business in a public area where local regulations permit.

This will be the second tour by the Country Christian Bookshop. Last December it visited the Central and South Burnett areas and the Elliot Heads beach mission.

In Munduberra the shop was in the main street during the town's mardi gras and it was also set up at the Inglewood Show.

The mobile shop is fitted with 80 feet of shelf display plus storage areas. Its stock includes children's books, records, cassettes, general reading and teaching material as well as devotional and study aids.

Mr. Floyd does not see himself as a book salesman, however.

"I'm a Christian literature missionary," he said.

"I want to see people become interested in reading the Bible and Christian oriented books."

He said that most sales were to Christian people who have little or no local Christian literature resources.

SU's anti-apartheid move

For five years Scripture Union in South Africa has been running adventure holiday camps for young people of all racial and cultural groups in an attempt to demonstrate that the answer to South Africa's racial dilemma can be found in the Gospel of Jesus Christ.

"We have always been convinced about the dynamic of the Gospel. We've seen people changed by the Gospel. As God's people we know we should be in the forefront of righteous change." Eddie Prest, the General Secretary of Scripture Union in South Africa commented.

"After much heart-searching, we in Scripture Union dedicated ourselves in the context of our evangelism, to work for a society without discrimination working with Jesus in the way of peace — 'breaking down the wall of contempt that used to separate us' (Ephesians 2:14)."

So Camp Havago began. At the most recent camp, some boys came with fears about mixing with other races, others came with resentments following school boycotts and closures. But the living presence of Jesus brought acceptance and peace as the boys found Him for themselves.

"We're not fooling ourselves," says Prest, "that these multi-racial activities will produce world-shattering results, but we are convinced that God's intervention is needed in South Africa today. So we press on."

"Words without works lack credibility — works without words lack clarity."

"We have seen Jesus portrayed as Jesus the aesthetic, the pale Galilean, the liberal gentleman of the Victoria era, the founder of modern business, the clown of Godspell, the disillusioned celebrity of Superstar, Jesus the capitalist and the revolutionary," said the Rev. John Stott.

He urged his congregation to dismiss these false images and to refer to the biblical text about Jesus, in his public ministry, went about teaching and doing good.

He also urged more Christians to be involved in social action.

Mr. Scott, rector emeritus of All Souls, Langham Place, London, was speaking at 12 public meetings in May to celebrate the 125th anniversary of the Anglican Home Mission Society.

WHAT A WORLD

The Singing Sisters

Lesley Hicks

I had occasion recently to spend a day, with an overseas guest, visiting the Australian branch of the Evangelical Sisters of Mary at their newly-acquired headquarters at Theresa Park, near Cobbitty. It was an unique and memorable experience for me.

Like most Australian evangelicals, I had found the idea of an order of sisters, neither Roman nor Anglo-Catholic, difficult at first to work out; especially puzzling was the contrast in connotation between "evangelical" and "Mary" in their title. Through reading some of the books of their founder Mother Basilea Schlink, notably "Realities", and since my visit, her autobiography "A Fore taste of Heaven", I have become aware of the sisterhood's remarkable history and aims.

It was founded in Darmstadt, Germany, under the leadership and vision of Dr. Clara Schlink and Miss Erika Madauss. These two were later given the names Mother Basilea and Mother Martyria by the co-founder, Methodist District Superintendent Reidingen. In the midst of the chaos of the war's ending and the bombing of the city, revival had broken out amongst the girls in the flourishing Bible classes led by these two women. The emphasis then and ever since was on a deep love for Jesus which flows from repentance and leads to uncompromising discipline.

The call to a communal life led through many struggles to the establishment of the sisterhood, with the first seven girls initially resident in the attic apartment of Schlink family home. The founding ceremony took place in March 1947. Their name intends no hint of worshipping Jesus' mother — in the words of Mother Basilea, "it was to be symbolic of the pathways of faith and loving dedication to the will of God, which Mary followed as the first disciple of Jesus."

Their original links were with the protestant Confessing Church and the Methodist Church, but the MEK, the youth organisation of which Dr. Schlink and Miss Madauss were leaders, was an interdenomination, evangelical body, and from the start the Sisterhood sought to bring reconciliations between various groups and denominations of Christians.

In fact, reconciliation on the basis of deep repentance of one's own and for corporate and national sins has characterised the movement from the outset, within the sisterhood and in its ministry to others. In particular the sisters were to express grief and contrition on behalf of all Germans for the crimes of the Nazi regime, by placing plaques at sites of former atrocities, plaques with text such as:

"Have mercy upon us, O God.

Deliver us from bloodguiltiness.

In deep shame and grief we remember all the victims who suffered and died here in torment at the hands of the German people.

The Evangelical Sisterhood of Mary.

The sisterhood often met with opposition and slander, most hurtfully from within the churches. Mother Basilea steadfastly refused to retaliate or to relinquish her vision and aims at any point, convinced that they were God-given. Battles of faith against bureaucratic, financial and spiritual obstacles accompanied the establishment of "Canaan", the "promised land" headquarters of the order in Darmstadt, West Germany; the book "Realities" tells of the "miracles of answered prayer" experienced in those days when the chapel, houses and gardens were being built and later laid out.

Now it is a place where guests from all over the world may come for spiritual renewal in repentance, reconciliation and worship, and 16 similar centres have been established in other countries, for instance, America, Great Britain, Israel, Greece, Italy, Denmark — and most recently, Australia.

The thirteen Sisters resident here, who include ones of German, American, Scandinavian and Australian nationalities, have begun their own Australian Canaan, and visiting it found it a heart-warming centre of joy and love. A bonus for them in finding the property in the lovely rural setting of Cobbitty is that it adjoins a little old Anglican church building, disused for some years and now, with permission, being lovingly refurbished and put to use as their chapel.

In March, just after the sisters moved from their temporary home at Pennant Hills, they welcomed their founder on her first visit to Australia.

The Sisters make a delightful practice of singing songs of greeting and farewell, of improvising songs of praise and thanksgiving, as well as singing hymns well known to them, often composed by Mother Basilea herself.

So if you should meet some "nuns" (they prefer to be called sisters) wearing an attractive cream habit, more than likely singing to guitars, and distributing leaflets and booklets with beautifully lettered texts, you will know who they are. Their ministry is a growing one of intercession, of sharing the Lord's grief at sin and blasphemy, of warning and preparedness for Christ's coming again, and above all of praise and love for Him.

BOOK REVIEWS

To Have and To Hold

Collins 1979, 209 pp.
David Atkinson,
£5.95

Dr. Atkinson was until recently librarian of Latimer House in Oxford which is an evangelical centre for theological research. This book is the fruit of a number of years of hard work and thought. It is particularly timely in view of the present crisis about marriage so evident in society and the church. Dr. Atkinson is a sensitive and careful thinker and his work is an important contribution to the problems of marriage, divorce and remarriage.

To my mind the most valuable section of the book is found at the beginning. It is here that Atkinson reviews the state of the question and gives a historical survey of the different positions taken up by the churches. He concentrates particularly on the Fathers and the Reformers. In his positive contribution, he emphasises the concept of marriage as a covenant, and works out the implications for marriage discipline. In the course of this he offers his own exegetical word on the key biblical texts.

I find it hard to agree with Atkinson, however, in the matter of the right to remarriage. This, he asserts, is pre-supposed in scripture. But if this is so, is it difficult to explain why Paul actually legislates about the matter, forbidding remarriage in one case and allowing it in another. We may also ask whether the concept of covenant is sufficient to sustain all we may believe upon the "one flesh" relationship.

In short, a most helpful book, to be studied with care.

Education for marriage

Over the last five years statistics show that divorce rates in Australia are extremely high. Furthermore, high levels of marital strain are also indicated among couples who remain together and who choose to avoid divorce or separation for moral, religious and various practical grounds. Many young couples experience significant levels of marital conflict very early in their marriage. Much of this conflict emerges from basic incongruities within such couples' attitudes toward marriage and their expectations concerning their own and their partner's role performances within their relationship.

There is little doubt that it would be helpful for couples to become more informed, prior to marriage, concerning their role expectations and attitudes towards marriage, and also to become more aware of how each is seen by his or her partner.

A means of facilitating such consciousness-raising has been developed at the University of Minnesota by a team of research workers led by Professor David H. Olson. The tool is a questionnaire designed to: (1) Identify major problem areas likely to be encountered early in marriage; (2) Identify relationship strengths possessed by couples which will be likely to aid them in dealing with problems; (3) Provide specific information which can take the form of feedback to the couple in educational or counselling settings; and (4) Be objectively developed and scored so as to avoid problems of subjectivity and bias within the person providing such feedback.

The inventory in its current form is called PREPARE (Pre-Marital Personal and Relationship Evaluation) and is the fourth in a series of such instruments developed by Olson and his colleagues. The earliest version was published in 1968 and since then various revisions designed to improve the inventory's reliability and validity have produced a remarkably relevant and robust instrument.

PREPARE is a 125-item inventory which covers 11 important content categories related to marriage. These categories include:

Personality issues — assessing an individual's perception of the personality of their partner and the level of satisfaction or dissatisfaction with that perception. Questions deal with sense of humour, temper, moodiness, stubbornness, jealousy and possessiveness.

Realistic Expectation — assessing the rational quality of an individual's marriage expectations, view of love and commitment, and beliefs concerning relationship conflict.

Equalitarian roles — a category which covers beliefs and feelings about a variety of marital and family roles (occupational, household, sex-based role performances, parental) and attitudes toward power and authority in marriage.

Communication — which focusses upon the individual's feelings, beliefs and attitudes toward the role of communication in the maintenance of marital relationships. Items focus on the perceived ability to express emotions and beliefs, to listen, to respond appropriately and upon the style of communication which currently exists between the members of a couple.

Conflict resolution — assessing attitudes toward the existence of conflict and the means of resolving conflict, degree of openness and recognition of issues.

Financial management — which concerns the way economics are seen to be managed, how finances are to be dealt with and what kinds of values are judged to be important.

Leisure activities — assessing each individual's preferences for spending free time: social vs. personal, active vs. passive, shared vs. individual.

Sexual relationship — a category which assesses feelings and concerns about the affectional and sexual relationships. Items deal with satisfaction with expression of affection, level of comfort discussing sexual issues, attitudes toward sexual morality and birth control.

Children and marriage — a category dealing with feelings and beliefs about having and raising children and the likely impact upon the marriage.

Family and friends — assessing attitudes toward relationships with relatives, in-laws, and respective circles of friends.

Religious orientation — a category assessing an individual's attitudes, feelings and concerns about religious beliefs and practices insofar as they relate to marriage.

In addition to these areas PREPARE has a category to assess idealistic distortion, thereby enabling an educator or counsellor to assess the extent to which couples present their relationship in a distorted, largely socially desirable, fashion.

PREPARE is administered to a couple during a one hour session. They return for a two hour feedback session based upon the counsellor's interpretation of a 12-15 page computer printout which provides individual and couple scores, comparison to all other couples who have taken PREPARE, couple agreement scores, and identification of problematic issues and relationship strengths. Optional corrections to scores for idealistic distortion are also available. PREPARE can, and has been used, as a means of complementing traditional pre-marital education programmes run by counselling agencies.

PREPARE can only be administered by persons in the helping professions (such as psychologists, psychiatrists, social workers, marriage counsellors and clergy, etc.) who have been trained and accredited to do so. Training involves instruction in the nature of the instrument, the conditions under which it is administered to couples, the interpretation of couples' responses as contained in a computer printout, and the manner in which feedback is given to couples.

PREPARE has been available in Australia (in N.S.W., A.C.T., Qld., Vic., Tas., S.A.) since April 1980 and 260 persons (most of them clergy) have been trained to administer PREPARE. Over 500 couples have taken PREPARE. Studies in the U.S.A. have shown that pre-marital couples benefit from PREPARE. One study by Olson and his co-workers examined the effect of taking PREPARE on 116 couples and found that couples changed positively on several variables, the clearest and most noteworthy effect was that couples became more independent and less controlling after marriage. Similar studies are planned for Australian couples and preliminary studies are currently being carried out.

The availability of PREPARE in Australia is significant in that it will aid the achievement of the following goals:

For a couple:

1. Increases a couple's awareness of their relationship strengths and problematic issues.
2. Stimulates couples to discuss issues in their relationship.
3. Increases the desire and ability of a couple to begin working on their relationship before marriage.
4. Serves as a preventative tool so that couples will deal with issues early in their relationship before problems become too intense.
5. Helps the couple get their relationship off to a good start.
6. Primes a couple to become involved in further communion and enrichment programmes.

For Clergy and Counsellors

1. Provides a wealth of diagnostic information about a couple's relationship that would normally take 2-3 sessions to learn.
2. Useful with premarital and married couples interested in enriching their relationship.
3. Is an efficient and effective way to learn about a couple and to focus on relevant issues in their relationship.
4. Is easy to administer, interpret and use.
5. Helps to establish rapport with a couple and develop a more ongoing relationship with them.
6. Helps clarify when a couple needs additional counselling and in what areas.

Enquiries concerning PREPARE should be made through PREPARE, INC., Australian National Office, PO. Box 119, Concord West, N.S.W. 2138. (02) 736 2328. The National Co-ordinator for the programme is Dr. Alan E. Craddock and the N.S.W. Co-ordinator is John Robson of the Family Life Movement.

Morality in Bolivia

"Our Reconstruction Government is putting a major emphasis on the teaching of morality in our schools. We would like to co-sponsor with you a national contest in Biblical knowledge during the school year of 1981."

This quote is from a letter received by the head office of the WORLD HOME BIBLE LEAGUE in the United States of America. Written by the Minister of the Ministerio De Educacion Y Cultura in Bolivia, the request is then made for the World Home Bible League to supply 250,000 study booklets. The booklets are "LIVING TRUTH" series 1, "with the corresponding 10,000 very fine teachers' manuals."

"Besides this, we would appreciate 250,000 copies of the New Testament in order to continue the program begun five years ago."

The letter received then stated that the President himself, His Excellency President Luis Garcia Meza, also requested a further 100,000 copies of the same New Testament, for "use in the military barracks, homes for the aged, orphanages, hospitals, and other Government dependencies".

Such a challenge cannot be overlooked, according to Mr. Gerald Hanscamp, the General Secretary of the WORLD HOME BIBLE LEAGUE in Australia.

Already 500,000 copies of the New Testament, LO MAS IMPORTANTE ES EL AMOR, have been sent and distributed to schools throughout the Republic.

- (5) Five different schools of Christian thought were identified concerning what role "the legal system" ought to play.

(i) "Holiness" — Christians should concentrate on developing an example and foretaste of heaven in their own communities, and leave the legal system alone.

(ii) "Evangelism" — Christians should concentrate on "the gospel" and on not perpetuating their wower image — leave the legal system alone.

(iii) Limited Embodiment of Christian Ethics — Christians should attempt to use the legal system only to control violent self-help and to protect the very weak.

(iv) Limited Embodiment of Christian Ethics via Majority Opinion — Christian should attempt to convince the majority of Christian ethics before attempting to include those in the legal system.

(v) Church and State Equivalence. Christians should attempt to embody and enforce as many Christian ethics as possible in the legal system.

Whichever school of thought is embraced, it was noted that Christians generally have been poor at collecting facts and interpreting ethics from the bible. We ought to repent.

C.B.A. raises $35,000

Roger Climpson, Rev. Vernon Turner and Graham Lockley (morning announcer) at the microphone acknowledging some of the thousand gifts received by the Christian Broadcasting Association for its Radiothon.

The station was open to visitors, who came along to see how a radio station worked. For the announcers, "It was like being in a fishbowl". As they spoke on air, so faces peered at them through the glass windows. $35,000 was raised for the Association.

Roger Climpson read of people in need, who had been helped in the three-week campaign, as part of the station's "Christian Social Concern" programme.

Names of needy people had been sent in by listeners, 2CBA-FM in association with the Salvation Army, processed each case and many large retail stores assisted with food and clothing vouchers.

Tells of shop churches

Rev. Paul Chang, Christian Nationals Evangelism Council's Co-Ordinator for Indonesia, Malaysia, Singapore, Burma and Thailand, has been around Australia on his fourth visit, to raise support for the work in S.E. Asia, and to inform Australians on current events.

The ministry is to be found in 39 countries, amongst the National Churches.

In Singapore, the work involves "Shop Churches", established on the ground floor of the high rise apartments, which house hundreds of needy souls. When planning the buildings, the Government wisely allowed for shops at street level, to provide food and general household needs for each block. The C.N.E.C. gained approval to rent three such shops in various areas, and establish churches for the tenants. This work is now flourishing.

Also, from the main office in Singapore, Mr. Chang told of a growing tape ministry. Young people, who speak mainly English, can borrow a tape in the dialect of their parents, and so reach them.

Tapes are used also to train and encourage workers in distant areas of work, such as West Kalimantan and Northern Thailand. Away from Christian fellowship, such workers can receive tapes in their own language, and so receive nurture themselves.

Good News Correspondence Courses are handled by only two workers, reaching 7,000 students.

The Programme called "Sponsor a Child" is also carried on from the Singapore office. The cost is $10 per month and is centred amongst the refugees throughout S.E. Asia.

Christianity — Fact or Fiction?

Rev. John Wilson of Uganda

This was the topic for a week long mission marking the 150th anniversary of the King's School, Parramatta.

400 to 500 people — students, old boys, families and friends — came to hear Michael Cassidy, leader of the South African team of African Enterprise, the Rev. John Wilson of Uganda and other Africans and Australians who sang and gave testimonies at several evening evangelistic meetings.

The conquest of inner space

On Friday night's meeting (29th May), Mr Cassidy spoke of the 'God-shaped vacuum' in us all. "Different people feel it in different ways. T. S. Elliott wrote, 'We are the hollow men'. Hemingway saw life as meaningless: 'What's it all about, Alfie?'. Others, as loneliness: 'Hey you out there in the cold, feeling old, feeling lonely'. A Russian ballerina said after a performance, 'there is a desert in my heart'." He mentioned ways in which people seek to fill the gap, quoting Sinatra's "I did it my way".

What's your ambition?

"I was a businessman when I became a Christian, and I entered the church at once. How could I serve God in business?" said Mr Wilson. "But my new friends told me to go back and use my testimony there. I did, and became successful. I thought I could become rich, but God showed me that to make that my aim was wrong. Years later, I was asked to see the Minister for Foreign Affairs, who asked me to be Ambassador to the UK. As I walked back to my car to think about it, I saw that it had shrunk. How could I fit in it, I an ambassador? But Jesus challenged me, 'I am the Way: where are you going now?'" So I stayed at my job with Caltex, which then sent me to a conference in the USA. I introduced myself saying I had two ambitions, to serve Caltex to the best of my ability, but foremost to serve God."

"Who are the real escapists?"

"Those who are not here. The courageous ones — the realists know that they have to face God," said old-boy Adrian Lane in his testimony. "Like most Kings boys, I thought I was O.K. Then I saw the terrible arrogance and self-centredness of wanting to do things my way. If I died, and God asked me 'Why do you think I let my Son die?', I would have no answer."

Future failure

Christians at Sydney University are planning a mission for the fortnight of the 28th June to 12 July, the speakers being Phillip Jensen and John Chapman on the theme 'Future failure'.

"The 1980 Sydney University Mission provided us with good reasons, and motivation, to go ahead and plan another this year. The interest aroused in the gospel, the well attended meetings, the many opportunities for Christians to witness to their friends and the forty or so people who became Christians, were all indications to us that the time seemed right to do something similar," said Rosemary Pidgeon, secretary of the Mission Committee.

Mr Jensen is speaking on failure: the failure of religion (why religious people go to hell); of morality; of success; of humanity (why Jesus went to hell).

Mr Chapman is speaking on the future: Man for the future — the birth of Jesus; failure or the future — the death of Jesus; future of the world — resurrection of Jesus; what is your future? — the claim of Jesus.

Lunchtime meetings are in Carlsaw; evening meetings at Menzies Common Room, Women's College, at 7.30.

Meetings are open to all, and those involved ask for your prayers.

Reachout plans for youth

Northside Reachout, a project in which some 150 Sydney churches are involved, is planning a Youth Leaders' Conference to be held at Vision Valley from June 19 to 21.

PURPOSE OF CONFERENCE

The purpose of this Conference is to further equip youth leaders to lead Christians to reach out to the great numbers of youth presently outside the church.

Among the panel of speakers is the Rev. David Claydon, (formerly National Director of Scripture Union), Steve Webster, Campus Life Director for the Manly Warringah Area; Stafford Williams, Director of Gold Coast Youth for Christ; Bill Vincent, Convenor of the Board of Evangelism for the NSW Presbyterian Church; The Rev. Graham Barker, the National Campus Life Director for Australia Youth for Christ; and the Rev. Norman Pell, Reachout Co-ordinator for the Northside Reachout.

Seminar topics include 'Profile of a Christian Leader', 'Reaching Youth Outside the Church', 'Understanding Contemporary Adolescence', 'Steps in Discipleship', 'Planning the Programme' and 'Reaching Out Now'.

The plan is to assist youth groups to reach out now to the youth of their respective communities. In the Celebration Phase of the Reachout, scheduled for 21 February to 7 March at St. Ives Showgrounds, it is hoped the reach to more than 50 percent of the community now under the age of 25. Dr. Leighton Ford, Associate Evangelist of the Billy Graham Team will be speaking.

"Accepted as I am"

Jean Phillips left Australia for Singapore this week. She is the first Aboriginal woman to attend the HAGGAI INSTITUTE'S LEADERSHIP TRAINING COURSE in Singapore.

Miss Phillips is involved in chaplaincy work in Brisbane's jails, and has a deep concern for "her Aboriginal people".

Jean finished school at Grade 4 in primary school, with no opportunity for High School Education. "That is why this Leadership Training Course is so special to me," she said. "I was accepted as I am ... a concerned Christian."

Her leadership ability and concern to teach others were also deciding factors.

Travelling with Jean to Singapore was Mrs. Audrey Lumb, a supporter of H.I. work.

To encourage or condemn?

A six member World Council of Churches Team has begun a 17-day tour of Australia to assess the situation of the Australian Aborigines.

Speaking at the opening Press Conference at the Sydney headquarters of the Australian Council of Churches, Dr. Anwar Barkat, Director of the WCC Program to Combat Racism said, "We need to expose the situation of Australian Aborigines before the eyes of the world."

Team members include Elizabeth Adler (East Germany), Dr. Anwar Barkat (Pakistan), Mr. Bena-Silu (Zaire), Mr. Quince Duncan (Costa Rica), Mr. Mike Meyers (Mohawk Nation, USA), and Pauline Webb (UK). Invited by the Australian Council of Churches, the Team will visit Aboriginal communities, church leaders, politicians and government officials in five States.

The premier of Queensland, Mr. J. Bjelke-Petersen, and the premier of West Australia, Sir Charles Court, have spoken against the delegation's visit and have refused to meet the team.

Co-ordinator of the visit, Mr. Gary Foley, Chairman of the Aboriginal Advisory Committee of the ACC, told the press conference "the important thing about this visit is that Aboriginal people have a say. Aborigines have chosen all the places where this Team is going and we have deliberately chosen some of the worst places in Australia for the Team to visit. We want the Team to see the real situation, to talk to Aboriginal people and to find out from the people themselves what their problems are and what they perceive to be the answers to those problems".

Moore College Expands

The White Horse Hotel a three storey building in King Street, Newtown was sold as a going concern at a public auction on the 16th June to a member of the Moore Theological College Council for $710,000.

It is bordered on three sides by the College, and will be resold to the College, when sufficient funds have been raised. It has been claimed that in the past, the Hotel has been a source of nuisance, including molesting, noise and urinating on the walls of College buildings.

Outreach and Further Student Facilities

The College hopes to use it for local outreach and for further family residential accommodation.

The Hotel is some distance from any church building, and is opposite the site of the old IXL factory, now proposed for redevelopment as a housing commission estate. Part of the downstairs area may be used as a coffee lounge for informal outreach to the local community on week-ends.

Fifty families are resident in College, including 83 children, most of whom are of pre-school and primary school age. The beer garden will make an excellent recreation for these children. At present, there is very little space outside the pocket-handkerchief backyards of College houses.

The upstairs floors of the Hotel will be used for married students' accommodation; and the downstairs bar area converted into seminar and lecture rooms, and a students' recreation area.

Finance Needed

An urgent appeal to raise sufficient funds to enable the College to buy the Hotel has been launched. A brochure has been prepared and distributed. The College hopes that parishes and individuals will give generously, quickly, either by way of direct gift or by means of loans interest-free or on low interest. The entire sum required could be met if 710 Christians gave $1000 each. However, gifts of any size will be gratefully received.

If the sum is not found, the College will have no alternative but to sell some other of its property, including student housing.

A second Mother Teresa

Land of the lost

Uganda is the nation once called by Winston Churchill "The Pearl of Africa". Billy Graham, asked to identify the most Christian nation, said Uganda came closer to that description than any other.

Today it is a land hideously stricken and afflicted. The result of Idi Amin, war and drought.

There are an estimated 1.6 million homeless children in Uganda brutalised by what it has experienced. It is a generation of youth in need of moral reconstruction. Many have been placed in prisons, there being no other place for them.

One woman's love

Into this scene of nightmare and horror has come Marilyn Newman called by thousands of Ugandan children "Mama Newman". She has worked in East Africa for 25 years, knows the language and loves the people. And they love and trust her.

Mama Newman's campaign has several outreaches:

- 1) Going into the marketplaces and prisons to take the children and place them in Christian rehabilitation homes.
- 2) Teaching Christian and moral values as well as practical skills through children's farms and centres she is establishing in Uganda.
- 3) Providing food and clothing, care and most of all love.

Mama Newman's campaign brings homeless Christian widows to look after the children in Christian rehabilitation centres made up of "family units" consisting of a widow and up to 20 children.

She needs help and financial aid, to set up a network of these rehabilitation farms and centres. Australians can help by "adopting" one of these children. A donation of $20 a month will take a homeless child out of the filthy prisons or marketplaces and place them under the loving care of Mama Newman and her team. Blankets, tents, food, clothing also are all urgently needed.

Mama Newman works with International Christian Aid, a ministry of Evangelism Centre Ltd.
