

but can assure them that ~~good~~ good would arise from his reproofs of them, and would restore Peace eventually to their souls, and Comfort to their minds He tells them that he wrote to them the reproof of which they could stand lest says he, when I come I should have sorrow from them of whom I ought to rejoice; having confidence in you that my joy is the joy of you all. Still however he was bound to urge upon them that duty which they were bound to perform - The 11th: was annexed lest Satan should gain another advantage over them for he adds we are not ignorant

And if St. Paul had not interposed to regulate the interest of that Church by the Gospel Standard Latan would have soon proceeded to root out all old Godliness — The Ap. Interposition was extremely painful to him: It was with much Anguish of Heart, and many Tears, that he had written the Roman Epistle: and the Thought, that he had however reluctantly occasioned Grief to to those whom he had reproved was so painful to him, that nothing
