Dear Sir

It is so short a time since I last wrote that I have nothing farther to say than that Andrew is well, will be in London tomorrow from Dr Waters, where he has been for the Holidays and will write to you & Mrs Moore, this week be given to you by my Friend Mr Blaxland to whome any service you can render on his arrival, I shall consider as an obligation, he goes out with his family, you already I suppose know I have let my farm to him for seven years, & that he will take charge of my stock. Therefore I trust to your friendship in giving him any assistance that may be in your power, in my last about a fortnight ago I mentioned having received the Birds you were good enough to send me. My best regards to Mrs Moore

Yours truly
G Waterhouse

I shall desire Andrew when he arrives in Town, to write to you, & seal it himself which I will send to Mr Blaydard, & not having been seen by any body, you will know his real sentiments. My Father proposes to send you the Newspapers, & will write at the same time. In which you will see the Death of two of the greatest Characters that ever lived Mr Pitt & Mr Fox
