Reverend Sir:-

We are about to undertake the publication of a series of ten small volumes of sermons by many of the well-known preacher-scholars throughout the world. Would you kindly permit us to include any sermon of yours which you may feel is best fitted for a publication of this kind? It is desirable that the sermon should be such a one as you have preached in general course; that is, it should not have special application to any current event, as it is intended that these sermons shall be of general and permanent value to the reader.

Recently we published ten small volumes of sermons by many of the world's best known preachers, covering many centuries of time and representing nearly every civilised country. The wide reception which was accorded to this work leads us to believe that a second series, which will be modern and by prominent preacher-scholars and writers, will be especially acceptable. Such a collection of sermons as we are now making will constitute, we are sure, a standard work of great homiletic importance, and will have a widespread educational influence.

Great care will be taken in proof-reading so as to avoid errors, but if desired, proofs will be submitted to you before the final printing.

If you send us the sermon which we request, also please send the essential facts of your biography, some eight to fifteen lines in all, as we think that such sketches will add greatly to the interest of the proposed collection.

It will be an accommodation if you can let us have the sermon within the next few weeks. Of course if you have one on hand and can conveniently send it, we will be glad to have same at once. Enclosed please find stamped envelope for the sermon.

For your kindness we will be glad not only to send you a set of these ten volumes containing the sermons, but also to give you an extra set if you so desire for any institution which you have the honour to serve.

Hoping to hear from you per return mail, and thanking you in advance for the courtesies you may extend to us,

We are,

Yours very truly,

FUNK & WAGNALLS COMPANY.
