TWINS & TRIPLETS

1. Write here the name of someone who uses the same kind of toothpaste you do.....
.....
2. Find the person whose birthday is closest to yours and get his autograph here.....
.....
3. Find everyone who did the same thing last summer holidays that you did; stand in a corner together and sing "Jingle Bells".
4. List all those who have the same number of brothers and sisters as you.....
5. Can you find another person born in the same hospital or maternity home as you? Get them to sign here.....
.....
6. What was the last record you bought?.....
.....Find someone else who also owns it and sing a part of it.

7. Find two people whose middle names you didn't know. Write the names here.

8. What is the farthest away place to which you've travelled?.....Find someone else who's been there and tell them what you liked best about the place.
9. Count up the times each letter of the alphabet is used in your name. Which letter is used most?.....Find another person whose name has this letter most.
Have him write his name backwards here.....
.....If no one else has the same letter, sit on the floor and cry.
10. Mime (convey by actions but use no words) the title of your favorite TV programme. When someone guesses it, both of you shout, "We're through", and sit down together.

Sue Never Stops Talking, I Wonder Why?

Sue and Carol were walking home from school together. Carol, the quieter one, listened as Sue sputtered on:

"And then she had the nerve to tell me I was deliberately trying to attract attention. How did she figure that? I just wanted to tell Shirley her maths paper had fallen to the floor. She acts like I'm trying to be the teacher instead of her. Doesn't she get you? Honestly, I hate her; maths class ruins my whole day."

Carol nodded her head, not really agreeing. Sue didn't actually need anyone to agree with her since her feelings were pretty clear cut. Carol wasn't sure Sue even listened for her answers.

"Billy said he's coming 'round tonight to listen to my new Beatles' record. I'm so happy, I could just die! Don't you think Billy's just absolutely the most fabulous boy in our class? When he smiles at me, I don't know, I just go all funny. Boy, life is great!"

Carol thought about that. Was life great? Sue seemed to think so, even if Mrs. Bryan, their maths teacher, did usually make her mad every day. But it seemed just the same to Carol, home, school, church youth group, music lessons. Just the same as it always had. Boys ignored her and she wasn't much interested in them, either.

"Tomorrow I'm going round to Ken's. He and Eric are starting a new group and they're looking for a girl to sing with them. I'm glad Shirley and I have had all that folk singing experience but I do wish I could play the guitar better. That reminds me, could you do my charity collecting in the morning? I'm doing it until 10.30 but Ken says I've got to be at his house then. You just go to the church and they'll tell you where to go."

Inwardly, Carol felt sick. She hated going to peoples' houses and asking for money. They always gave something, even if only ten cents, but she was always afraid of being turned down. What she'd really like to do is try out for Ken's new group. She'd learned to play her brother's guitar, and she knew her voice sounded pretty good but no one, not Sue or her brother or even her mother, knew she could do it. And she'd never have the nerve to try out for Ken's group.

"Look at Pat over there. Isn't she wild? Ever since her family went overseas, she wears those hippie clothes and beads and all, after school every day. She'd wear them to school if she could. But she looks pretty good, doesn't she?"

Carol thought briefly of the sari her aunt had brought to her from Ceylon. Her aunt, young and pretty, had shown her how to drape the sari and suggested a costume party for Carol's friends, to show it off. Carol could fix saris for the others, out of sheets, they could paint on caste marks but . . . what if no one wanted to, or if they thought it were silly or something. Sue was a real talker but at least she seemed to know who she was and what she wanted, she had the nerve to be herself, to live, a participant in life, not just an observer. "That's what I am," thought Carol. "That's all I am! A watcher, an observer, a fraidy-cat. I'm always on the outside looking in. Why can't I just relax and enjoy things? I don't even know what or who I want to be!"

- 1 What are the problems Carol and Sue face in becoming persons in their own right?
- 2 Are these problems typical of your age group? How common are they?
- 3 What other factors would you add which prevent someone from becoming a whole, sure person?

"Then God Said,

Let us make man in our image, after our likeness; and let them have dominion over the fish of the sea, and over the birds of the air, and over the cattle, and over all the earth, and over every creeping thing that creeps upon the earth." So God created man in his own image, in the image of God he created him; male and female he created them. And God blessed them, and God said to them, "Be fruitful and multiply, and fill the earth and subdue it; and have dominion over the fish of the sea and over the birds of the air and over every living thing that moves upon the earth." And God said, "Behold, I have given you every plant yielding seed which is upon the face of all the earth, and every tree with seed in its fruit; you shall have them for food."

. . . .

"The Lord God

took the man and put him in the garden of Eden to till it and keep it."

. . . .

"So

out of the ground the Lord God formed every beast of the field and every bird of the air, and brought them to the man to see what he would call them; and whatever the man called every living creature, that was its name. The man gave names to all cattle, and to the birds of the air, and to every beast of the field; but for the man there was not found a helper fit for him."

(Genesis 1:26-29; 2:15, 19-20)

Phil and Ron pushed their bikes slowly up the hill. Neither had said a word since Graeme rode rapidly away. They were both wondering what to do. Pete's brother, who owned a terrific motorcycle, would be home next Saturday and Pete had asked them round to have a look at the bike. But Pete hadn't asked Graeme—he and Graeme didn't get along.

Phil, Ron and Graeme usually spent Saturdays at the river. As the two boys pushed their bikes they were thinking of the months of Saturdays at the river mouth: swimming, fishing, the boat, digging for shellfish; each day had brought some new activity, for the river was always changing. The two friends looked at each other and then quickly away.

"Aw, Graeme's still a kid", said Phil.

Ron nodded, but his eyes showed confusion. "I was sure he wouldn't want to go but I didn't think he'd get that mad!"

"Maybe we should have had Pete ask him, too", Phil suggested.

Ron's answer was confident: "He wouldn't go. Because it's Saturday, and Saturdays we always went to the river and besides, you know how he feels about Pete."

"Well", said Phil, "I'm not giving up the chance to ride on that motorcycle for anything. It's got everything. And Pete's brother will only be here with it on Saturday."

Ron hesitated a moment and then said, "Do you suppose we could get Pete to ask Graeme, and then talk Graeme in to going? I mean, he could forget how he feels about Pete just this once. Then we could go to the river in the afternoon."

Phil said slowly, "We could tell him if he doesn't come with us to Pete's, the river's off for good."

Gail turned away from the mirror with a sigh. The other girls looked at each other and their silence said more than any amount of words might have.

"Silly boots", she muttered. The others looked busily at the selection of shoes. Some girls look great in boots; some don't. Gail was one who didn't. Her legs were short and rather plump and the brown boots she had just tried on looked shiny and new but were quite unflattering to her. But every girl in her crowd, every girl in the whole school, had leather boots! Gail had saved the money and desperately wanted to be like the others, wearing boots with her suede mini-skirt. She turned to the other girls.

"What do you think?" she asked.

"No!" said John.

"Oh, really, John; why? What difference does it make?" asked his mother.

"Because I hardly even know her, for one thing", John replied. John and his mother had been over and over the same point several times. The end-of-term social was only a fortnight away and John didn't have a date. His mother's best friend was the mother of Joan, shyest girl in his form. For three days, John's mother had been urging him to ask Joan to the party.

"Well, then, do it because I want you to", she said. "How about that?"

(a) Write an ending for each story saying what you think will probably happen.

(b) Whose freedom is being limited?

How is it being limited?

How could this be avoided?

AGREE DISAGREE exercise

Here is a list of twelve statements. Go over them carefully. If you completely agree with a statement, leave it as it is. If you almost agree, change a word or words so that you can agree. If you disagree leave it as it is. Mark Agree or Disagree in the appropriate places.

AGREE	DISAGREE
		1. Young persons should always do exactly what their parents tell them to do.
		2. It is better for a parent to make a good decision for a young person than to let the young person make a bad decision for himself.
		3. Parents should make their children assume a great deal of responsibility so that they can become strong adults.
		4. It is important for adults to push young persons to do those things that are right.
		5. Once a person has made up his mind about a matter, he should not change it, no matter how great the pressure.

|  | 6. A person's obligation to his home and family is always greater than his obligations to anyone or anything outside the family.               |
|  | 7. Adults, because they are older and wiser, should never allow their own personal problems to affect their behaviour towards younger persons. |
|  | 8. Because a young person has less to do, there is always time for whatever duties he may have at home or at school.                           |
|  | 9. Rebellion against authority is a sign of strength of character.   |
|  | 10. When a person is in conflict with others, the Bible will give him instructions.  |
|  | 11. When in conflict with others, the best way out is to avoid talking about it.   |
|  | 12. When conflict arises, follow your own desires for the best solution.   |

Luke 2:41-52

- 1 What clues do you find in this story that the young Jesus had feelings about freedom in common with yours?
- 2 How did he deal with these problems?
- 3 How did his parents deal with them?
- 4 What do we learn about freedom from this story?

SPOKESMAN 1: O God the Father,
 KIDS: Please let us go free.

SPOKESMAN 2: Pharaoh, god of Egypt,
 KIDS: Let us go free.

SPOKESMAN 1: Officer, officer,
 KIDS: Let us go free.

SPOKESMAN 2: Father, mother, teacher, uncle
 KIDS: Leave us alone.

SPOKESMAN 1: Minister, counselor, coach, boss
 KIDS: Leave us alone.

SPOKESMAN 2: Society of the seventies,
 KIDS: Leave us alone.

SPOKESMAN 1: Exclusive friends who try to exclude us,
 KIDS: Let us go where others go.

SPOKESMAN 2: Laughing people, laughing at us,
 KIDS: Let us go without your snickering.

SPOKESMAN 1: Thoughtless parents pushing us,
 KIDS: Let us go, we have our rights.

SPOKESMAN 2: Staring strangers gaping at us,
 KIDS: Let us go as teen-age men.

SPOKESMAN 1: Proper matrons whispering about us,
 KIDS: Let us go as teen-age women.

SPOKESMAN 2: Society of the seventies,
 KIDS: Just leave us be.

LEADER: What would you be?
 KIDS: We'd be ourselves.
 We'd be free to be ourselves.
 We'd be teen-age men and women.
 We'd be free.

LEADER: And what would you do?
 KIDS: We'd do as we pleased.
 We'd go where we liked.
 We'd live for ourselves.
 We'd be free for a change.

LEADER: And how would you do it?
 KIDS: We'd go wild with delight.
 We'd swing till we fell.
 We'd zoom down the street
 And paint the town red.

can't i be myself?

Ruth and Tony were hunched over the kitchen table. Tony's face was contorted with a mixture of anger and confusion.

"I just can't take it", he said. "I don't want to do it and yet I seem to, anyhow. It's bad enough looking like him and talking like him—I can't do anything about that—but now here I am acting like him. I shouted at that referee today just like my old man does!"

Ruth smiled in understanding. She remembered being asked recently why she attended the church she did and she could only answer that it was because her parents went there. Ruth reminded Tony of the incident.

"Yeah", grumbled Tony, "and that's probably why I'll vote Labour when I'm old enough and you'll make scones the way your aunt taught you to."

"It's not that I don't admire all of them", Ruth observed. "I do, by and large. But I want to be me. I want to make up my own mind about things. I want to choose my clothes because I like how they look, not because red is the colour of the moment."

"And I don't want to be an extension of my dad", Tony said, "a chance for him to live it all over again."
